Critical Care Time Podcast

"We are excited to partner with Critical Care Time as the primary sponsor of its inaugural season. These podcasts will share insightful discussions of issues faced by physicians who care for the critically ill, whether the patient is in an intensive care unit, emergency department, operating room or ambulance," said Kevin Chung, MD, Chief Medical Officer of SeaStar Medical. "We are impressed by the Critical Care Time team of leading physicians and are confident this podcast series will be a valuable educational resource for critical care practitioners in their fight to save lives.

"Our sponsorship allows SeaStar Medical to connect with the healthcare professionals we are working to support with our novel, patented Selective Cytopheretic Device. The SCD is our cell-directed extracorporeal therapy that has the potential to save the lives of critically ill patients afflicted with organ-damaging hyperinflammation," he added.

"We are tremendously grateful for SeaStar Medical's support in helping us achieve our dream of establishing this podcast," said Cyrus Askin, MD, podcast co-creator. "We intend to take deep dives into some complex critical care issues including respectful discussions of messy or controversial topics not typically covered by other podcasts. Importantly, our focus will be on telling the human stories behind the clinical practice of medicine. After a year of planning, we are excited to finally go live."
